If it's museums then there's the world famous Ashmolean, a smaller version of the British Museum. Nearby is the Natural History Museum, one of Oxford's hidden gems with a huge collection of zoological and geological items. Just next door is The Pitt Rivers Museum with archaeological and ethnographic objects from all over the world. Check out their websites to see more details. For shopping then the extended Westgate Centre might be the first choice or maybe Queen Street, Cornmarket Street or covered market. Whatever your choice there are plenty of restaurants, cafes and coffee shops for refreshment stops.
